B. The second running of Intelligence Research (Techniques) course started on Monday, 24 March, with six OSI analysts. [] is conducting this course in Barton Hall. As a result of experience gained from the first running, a number of changes have been made. The class is meeting four days a week for five weeks, giving the students Friday to take care of branch responsibilities and also an opportunity to make up work missed during absences. In this running of the course, each student is applying the techniques to an individual project which he is working on in his branch; in the first running of the course, the techniques were applied to a team project in which all students participated.

C. Six students completed Reading Techniques No. 42 on Friday, 21 March, and final interviews are being conducted this week. Because of overseas assignments, two of the eight students who started the course failed to complete it.

D. On Monday, 24 March, eight students started Reading Techniques No. 43. There are two from OSI, two from FI, one from ORR, and one from Cable Secretariat. Because enrollment in the course was lower than had been expected, only one section is necessary.
